Round up of the Premier League

by Chris Jagger

You are lying about average after five rounds (out of seven) of the all-play-all Premier League. To win the league, would you prefer to still have to play the two weakest teams or the two strongest teams?

Sounds obvious, and if your aim is simply to get a high score, then it is clearly right to want to have the two weakest teams left. However, to win then simply beating the two weakest teams heavily may not be enough – one of the top two teams could score reasonably and end up still ahead. To have things in your control, it is perhaps better to have the strongest two teams left – a heavy win against them could well leapfrog you into the lead.

1♥, to take away space and show the pre-emptive nature of the hand. The X of 4♥ merely helped us have a controlled auction to slam. 5♠ confirmed all the key cards to give partner the chance to bid the grand. Partner could see it was essentially 50% so declined to bid it – a sensible decision when many people had missed slam. In fact we made 13 tricks.

This board felt unlucky:

I passed 3♥, and North made a lucky raise to 4♥, making it too hard for either hand to do anything. This drifted two off, but in fact 5♣ is making.

The winning action is to bid 4♣ over 3♥ – but with a singleton in partner's suit, a doubleton heart and missing quick tricks in the minors, it is very unlikely that 4♣ is going to be right – of course a 6115 shape opposite with the ♠A and ♣Q is the time when it is! Several others including our opponents did bid 4♣, but apart from the most inveterate overbidders, most decided in the cold light of day it was too much.

Many pairs missed slam, but our match was flat in 6♣. Our opponents gave us too easy a ride: 3♥ looks preferable to

To get some IMPs back my partner took an aggressive action on this hand (given that partner hasn't made a UCB):

NS Vul	♠ 1084
Dealer W	♥ A10
	♦ J1095
	♣ Q1097
♠ A5		N	♠ 763

2♠	P	2NT	P
3NT	All pass

It is a good contract, but that is because dummy is pretty suitable, unusually with stops in all three outside suits!

A club was led to the jack (bad news for declarer, who could have expected the jack to be onside) and a diamond returned. Declarer won and played the ♠K to the ace. Another club went to the king, and a second diamond through. Declarer won and now had five losers and only eight winners. He cashed the spade suit and West was caught in a triple squeeze – he had to keep the ♣A and ♦Q, so when the last spade was played he had to pitch a heart. West was disappointed that his partner did not have the ♥9!

In the last set we were playing the leaders, and needed a good win to secure victory. This hand helped the cause:

N	E	S	W
			P
P	1♥	1NT	2♦
3NT	P	P	X

Love all	♠ QJ4
Dealer W	♥ Q7653
	♦ K93

♠ AK83		N	♠ 1075
♥ -		W	♥ AJ984
♦ Q1087654		E	♦ 2
♣ 72		S	♣ KJ84
			♠ 962
			♥ K102
			♦ AJ
			♣ AQ1093

West passed first in (not a call I like – it is going to be hard to get across both suits and the power of this hand later), as did North. East opened a light third-in-hand 1♥_X and South made an aggressive no-trump overcall. West bid a NF 2♦, with plenty to spare – easy to imagine that game has been missed. North stretched to bid 3NT, and West, with two entries, had a clear double.

Declarer won the diamond lead and surveyed a fairly hopeless dummy. Guessing right you can get out for one off. He led a spade to the queen which held, and then a club to the ten, which also held. Things were looking better, but still like one off. Another spade was taken by West, who cashed three rounds of the suit (dummy and East throwing hearts, declarer throwing a club), before exiting with a diamond to the ace. Declarer by this stage is playing the hand double dummy, and will get out for one off, as he can keep endplaying East. He played a heart to the queen, which after a long think, East decided to duck. This was fatal. Declarer cashed the ♦K, squeezing East. If he pitched a club then declarer would have a spade, heart, three diamonds and four clubs. If he pitched a heart, declarer could take the club finesse, and duck out the (by now bared) ♥A. Nine tricks made, to go with 3♦ making in the other room.

made 11 tricks in spectacular fashion by dropping the ♣K offside. Cheltenham overbid these cards to 6NT, so this was 13 imps to Cambridge.

Also in the set, Cooke-Mestel bid a cold 6♦ on distributional values which was missed by Cheltenham, so Cambridge led by 25 with eight to play.

Cooke got a chance to redeem himself for going off in 4♥ earlier when he played the following hand in 3NT after a 2♠ weak jump overcall from his RHO:

Game all	♠ 2
Dealer N	♥ 85
	♦ AQJ84
	♣ AQJ42
♠ 84		N	♠ QJ10976
♥ AQ93		W	♥ J1062
♦ 963		E	♦ K
♣ K873		S	♣ 96
	♠ AK53
	♥ K74
	♦ 10752
	♣ 105

West led ♠8. If either of the minor suit kings are wrong, the ♥A will be wrong too or East would be too heavy for a weak jump overcall. Since a heart switch through the king will be fatal, it looks like you need both minor-suit finesses; even then you have to be a bit careful with your entries. The Cheltenham declarer ran the ♦10, intending to play a club to the 10 if it won. Unfortunately for him, RHO won the ♦K, switched to a heart and beat the contract by two tricks, as declarer had to lead away from the clubs.

Cooke spotted a small extra chance. He ran the ♣10 at trick 2. When that held, he repeated the club finesse and played ♦A and ♦Q. When the ♦K was singleton offside he crossed to the ♦10, cashed his other spade, cashed the diamonds, and threw West in with the 4th club to lead away from the ♥A for eleven tricks. Had the ♦K been onside, the contract would still have made, since declarer can afford to lose a diamond and still make 9 tricks.

The last 8 saw Cambridge add on a further 20 imps winning by 46 imps.

A Little Stock of Horrors, part 1

by Simon Barb

Are you a good enough defender to concede 5♦X+1 on the hand that follows?

I forget the vulnerability, but I think it was both sides vulnerable. I was playing rubber with an unknown partner who was billed as a “solid” player, albeit 80 years old!

I held: ♠x ♥Axx ♦Jxx ♣AKQJ108

Partner opens first in hand with 3♣ and RHO intervenes with a double. I think that there is a case for a choice of bids here but I wanted to avoid misunderstandings, so passed. LHO bids 4♦, partner passes, RHO bids 5♦ and it is back to you.

I probably should have passed here but I did not believe that RHO was holding some massive 11 playing-trick hand (his partner having shown no values for his bidding so far) and essayed a double. Where were the tricks coming from? I had three trumps which would be a nuisance at least, they were not going to make any tricks in clubs, hearts had not been mentioned and surely they were not going to be romping off spade tricks.

Partner led the ♠K, and I saw that my rationale was at least partially justified.

Dummy: ♠Ax ♥KJ1098 ♦AQxxx ♣x

Well, optimism reigns, I thought, as declarer won with dummy's ace.

I felt less good when declarer turned up with five diamonds (headed by the king), and drew trumps in three rounds, ending in dummy.

He then led the ♥8 and I rose with the ace, declarer following with the queen.

It looked as though partner had four hearts, to go with her seven spades and diamond void, so two clubs.

Declarer superficially still had both a spade and club to lose but I was out of spades, so how to get partner in quickly to cash her winning spade?

Can you see what is coming?

The "answer" is of course to underlead the ♣AKQJ108! Partner can overtake the ♣8 with the ♣9 and cash the setting ♠Q.

Except it didn't happen quite like that. Declarer covered the ♣8 with the ♣9 and much to his surprise held the trick.

His losing spades went away on dummy's hearts, and that was 5♦X+1!

Results round-up

National competitions
